7 Sirfire Ancestors Of India

Every morning, Savitri Bai - the first ever female teacher of India, used to carry an extra Sari with her while walking to the school. Because people used to throw mud, cowdung, stones along with insults at her.

You know why?

Because she along with her husband was doing something for which society says
“ Aise Thode Hi Na Hota Hai”

Savitribai Phule & her husband Jyotiba Phule were used to face the challenges, insults, opposition from the society of which they were a part of.
Even their family disowned them.

But thankfully nothing could have stopped them.

Because it was them who started the education for the deprived section of society
“Women & Lower Caste Children”.

7 Sirfire Ancestors Of India

They opened the first ever school for girls & many more schools where children of lower caste were also taught along with other children.

They believed education was the key to breaking the cycle of oppression for both women and lower-caste communities.

Through her teaching, Savitribai gave young girls the strength to stand up for themselves in a world that often silenced them.

So whenever you see an educated female or someone of not -general caste, don't forget to thank these Sirfire Ancestors Of India:

“Savitri Bai & Jyotiba Phule”

It was them who made it all possible :)
