7 Sirfire Ancestors Of India

Judges were shocked to listen this from a 19 years old boy getting death sentence:

"If I had more lives than one, it would have been a great honour to me to sacrifice each of them for my country."

It's a story of The man whose photo Bhagat Singh used to carry in his pocket.

At the age of 16 he went for studies to California where he got the chance to join the Ghadar party in the mission to free India. Soon, he became one of the most active member of the party. And as soon as he saw that its the right time to spread the fire of freedom movement in our country, he immediately returned back to India.

And while carrying out his work of printing and distributing literature, transporting weapons and teaming up Indian soldiers from British Army, he got arrested.

After severe torture & interrogation in jail, even judges advised him by seeing his age to take the name of other revolutionaries but he simply refused and took whole of the blame on himself.

At the time of hanging, he stood tall without any fear, knowing his sacrifice would inspire countless others in coming generations.
And he was right.

Now whenever you see someone getting inspired by Shaheed Bhagat Singh, Don't forget to remember this young man from Ludhiana who inspired our inspiration,
